This show is my take on Shostakovich's "Fire of Eternal Glory" as performed by the 1993 Phantom Regiment. The piece was almost unknown in the western world prior to 1993, however, it is something of a national treasure in the former Soviet Union- Shostakovich wrote it in 1960 as an entry in a competition to find a new Russian national anthem.

Although considered to be a small work in Shostakovich's catalog, “The Fire of Eternal Glory” was one of his best known works in the USSR. A recording of the piece, originally written for the war memorial in Novorossiyeck, has been playing continuously at that location since its construction in 1960, possibly making it one of the most frequently played pieces of classical music in existence.
