When, in our turbulent day, we hear of a 'clash of civilizations,' it's easy to imagine an unbridgeable chasm between the Islamic world and Christendom stretching back through time. Two Faiths, One Banner shows how in Europe, Muslims and Christians were often comrades-in-arms, repeatedly forming alliances to wage war against their own faiths and peoples.

"Almond draws on a multitude of sources to create an alternate history of interactions between Christians and Muslims in Europe over 800 years, boldly concentrating on 'unity and collaboration instead of friction and division.' His approach shows how Muslims were a vital and regular part of Europe and its true history, not the European history he believes is being 'airbrushed' to exclude Jews and Muslims...
