Poem For The Day One

A Poem for Barack Obama's Presidential Inauguration January 21, 2013 One sun rose on us today, kindled over our shores, peeking over the Smokies, greeting the faces of the Great Lakes, spreading a simple truth across the Great Plains, then charging across the Rockies. One light, waking up rooftops, under each one, a story told by our silent gestures moving behind windows.

"Aaron McCollough's poetry is a living system that is one part the assaulted world and one part the world's conscious surveyor. In Underlight 'a private sorrow drapes' revealing an ecology of disappointment where the poet reports 'hearing at least feels like holding and where else does it go.' While the music here plumbs various shapes a final hour can take, it also insists we should never ...

One day you'll feel like she did, And you won't know what to do.
One day you're gonna love her, But she won't feel the same. One day you'll know how it feels. To have your blue skies turn to rain.
One day you'll dream of only her, But she'll be dreaming of someone else. One day she'll feel as if she's in heaven,
